Adventure! Awe! Terror! And no tan lines! Imagine watching the float plane's pilot wave goodbye as he flies back to civilization without you, leaving you to spend ten days in the bush working with a complete stranger. Imagine no phones, electricity, running water, computers or TV, and no help if something goes wrong! Imagine an outhouse as a luxury item. Imagine a woman you barely know being your only lifeline. When I stepped off the Greyhound Bus in Blind River in 1981, nothing could have prepared me for the adventurous life I was about to step into. I was part of a two woman cruising team working for the Ministry of Natural Resources. We flew into some of the most remote lakes in northern Ontario, 4x4'd into wilderness campsites, and canoed some of Canada's most beautiful rivers. We were dropped off with nothing but a tent, a canoe, a few boxes of food, and a radio to make do with. We had a compass, an aerial photo, and a base map to guide us. We fought off legions of mosquitoes, lived with the continuous fear of becoming lost, or worse, being mauled by a bear. When we started out together, we wondered if we could depend on each other in a crunch. It didn't take long to find out. It was a summer like no other and the journey of a lifetime.
